INTRODUCTION

The program emphasis is systemic and relational practice within the scope of couples and family therapy. The curriculum is designed to give students an excellent clinical and academic background, meeting COAMFTE standards for practice. Students are well prepared to work in a variety of settings, including mental health, public and private agencies, medical, private practice, educational, managed care, church, and legal.

MISSION, VISION, AND VALUES

MISSION: Educating MFT students to provide effective and competent care to diverse families in local, national, and international communities.

VISION: MFT students will learn how to "make diverse families whole." The definition, configuration, and experience of family vary widely; and students are trained to regard, respect, and value human difference and family types so as to work effectively with all those who seek the services of a marital and family therapist.

VALUES:

Compassion—The sympathetic willingness to be engaged with the needs and sufferings of others. Among the most memorable depictions of compassion in Scripture is the story of the Good Samaritan.

Integrity—The quality of living a unified life in which one's convictions are well-considered and match one's actions. Integrity encompasses honesty, authenticity, and trustworthiness.

Excellence—The commitment to exceed minimum standards and expectations.

Freedom—The competency and privilege to make informed and accountable choices and to respect the freedom of others. God has called us not to slavery but to freedom.

Justice—The commitment to equality and to treat others fairly, renouncing all forms of unfair discrimination.

ADMISSIONS

In addition to Loma Linda University admissions requirements, admission to the MS in Marital and Family Therapy Program is governed by the policies and procedures established by the School of Behavioral Health. Additional admission requirements include:

- Applicants must have a bachelor's degree from an accredited university or college.
- Applicants should have a cumulative grade point average of 3.0 or above (on a 4.0 scale) in bachelor's coursework for at least the final 45 units prior to graduation. Applicants with lower grade point averages will be considered if the last 45 quarter credits (30 semester units) of coursework shows significant improvement or if they have additional attributes that demonstrate preparedness and an appropriate fit for Marital and Family Therapy education. Work and volunteer experiences must be verified by employer/supervisor statements on official agency stationery. Further consideration will also be given to individuals who provide evidence of additional certifications and/or training that illustrate commitment to a career in Marriage and Family Therapy.
- All applicants must complete an online application, which includes a personal statement, three letters of recommendation (one from an academic source and one from a work supervisor), and submission of all undergraduate transcripts.
- Individual admission interview with a member of the faculty.

LICENSURE AND PROGRAM ACCREDITATION

The program is fully accredited by the Commission on Accreditation for Marriage and Family Therapy Education (COMAFTE), the accrediting body for the American Association for Marriage and Family Therapy (AAMFT). The national commission functions to ensure that academic and clinical training programs adhere to the highest standards of the profession.

CLINICAL TRAINING AND EXPERIENCES

At minimum, 500 clinical hours and 100 direct supervision hours are required. Of the direct client contact hours, at least 200 hours must be with couples and families. Of the direct supervision hours, at least 50 hours must be with raw data (video, audio, and live supervision). For every week in which clients are seen, the student must have at least one hour of individual supervision. The ratio of supervision hours to treatment hours must not be less than one hour of supervision to five hours of clinical contact. Students enrolled in the program should consult the clinical training manual regarding clinical training requirements.

DEGREE COMPLETION

- 90 quarter units of graduate work, which includes core courses, electives, and a 3-unit religion course. The program takes two years to complete, at minimum.
- Successful completion of a written comprehensive examination (taken before advancement to candidacy) and an oral examination (taken at the end of the program).

WHY ATTEND LLU?

1. The Loma Linda University MFT is one of the most well-established programs in the state of California and has the distinction of being COAMFTE-accredited. COAMFTE is the commission that falls under the American Association for Marital and Family Therapy (AAMFT), the only national organization which represents the marriage and family therapy profession.
2. The program is based on the values of compassion, integrity, excellence, freedom, and justice.
3. The program's mission is to prepare practitioners who will promote the health, hope, healing and well-being of diverse individuals, couples, families, and communities. This mission supports the notion that transforming relationships in diverse families is essential.
4. The program strongly encourages and accepts a diversity of students and faculty, challenging all who are involved to learn from the richness of multiple perspectives.
5. Faculty are committed to working as a team and helping to ensure student success. Small class sizes ensure excellence in academic and clinical training and allow for substantial academic and professional mentoring.
6. The marital and family therapy program emphasizes a multi-systemic approach that addresses the medical/biological, psychosocial, and spiritual aspects of human life within a larger systems framework. We believe that relationships are the context in which change occurs. As people become more connected to each other and their communities, the potential for growth and healing is enhanced.

7. The program supports the development of individual student strengths and allows a thoughtful, holistic integration of personal practices of faith and professional work.
